Nagula Buru; saltwater country

Nagula Buru Pty Ltd is an Indigenous owned and operated company based in Broome, Western Australia offering business opportunities to utilities, facility management and construction sectors in the North West's resources industry.

Led by experienced local Yawuru people, Nagula Buru welcomes discussions from all stakeholders pursuing business in the Kimberley region.

Combining our resources with your industry knowledge and experience, we aim to develop beneficial working relationships and joint ventures in line with your company objectives.

About Nagula Buru

Nagula Buru, an Indigenous-owned and operated business, is delivering on local engagement and participation commitments in the Kimberley's emerging resources industry.

Established in 2014, Nagula Buru is focusing on opportunities with partners providing facilities management to secure sub-contract work in the catering, cleaning and general facilities management areas.

"We bring to the partnership significant local experience in training of Indigenous people, an extensive Indigenous network of Yawuru traditional owner groups and the broader Kimberley community, and the capability of our directors to work actively in the business partnership to ensure 'local content' outcomes are delivered for Indigenous people in the region. "

Nagula Buru aims to work with organisations to meet their community responsibilities by teaming up. We will work with your organisation to satisfy your values and objectives to work toward the common goal of bettering our people.

Commitments

Our 3 Core Values

Our core values include the generation of genuine employment opportunities for Indigenous people, and we seek to help a partner organisation secure a steady and reliable workforce based on our ability to:

1 - Connect

Source an Indigenous workforce locally

Many companies in the resource sector have commitments and policies to secure local Indigenous involvement.

Nagula Buru's directors are proud Yawuru men and have connections to the people and local corporations.

"We can utilise our connections to help local employment, focusing on indigenous employment."

2 - Build Capability

Prepare and train

Nagula Buru aim to prepare the local workforce through delivering appropriate training.

Nagula Buru has the capability to facilitate training to local people and we can also facilitate work-ready training. We look to work together with local training organisations and local employment agencies to reach our mutual goal and align ourselves with their programs.

"Currently the region lacks the skill sets required by the emerging oil and gas industry, we aim to overcome this. We're trying to bridge that gap and train our people up."

Nagula Buru can align with education providers through their connections at educational institutes.

Nagula Buru can even facilitate training outside of Broome to get employees industry-specific training.

3 - Sustain Commitment

Mentoring and support for the Indigenous workforce

Nagula Buru has impressive connections with service providers in the Broome area. Directors have the local knowledge, relevant links with Indigenous groups and employment providers.

"We understand the importance of sustaining local commitments and deliver on these objectives."

Opportunities

Nagula Buru is flexible in terms of business activities.

Our targeted opportunities will see our resources and strengths meeting partner's operational criteria.

Ideal business opportunities lie predominantly in the oil and gas industries' support services.

We can provide a workforce in cleaning, cooking and all utilities services and waste disposal, construction, gardening maintenance and property maintenance requirements.

We can also work on local transport contracts for the resources industry.

We are here for larger organisations that want to engage local workers and businesses.

These offerings also allow an Indigenous entity or corporation to benefit by having employment opportunities and developing their skills in that industry.

Why Nagula Buru?

Nagula Buru's directors have an impressive background in local engagement and the cultural connections and sensitivity to ensure your community commitments are reached and sustained.

With sales management, training, business, human resource, mining and construction experience, the Nagula Buru team can ensure your industry will be well represented.

Our strength lies in local engagement, local workforce, training and experience with Indigenous organisations.

Nagula Buru is 100 per cent Aboriginal-owned and managed by well-connected Yawuru people.

Mr Lee-Chi and Mr Puertollano are both long-time Broome locals with professional career experience.

They have direct ties with native title holders in the region, and are both board members on various Indigenous boards.

Nagula Buru and its directors boast a good grounding with the local business community.

Committed to Connect, Build Capacity and Sustain Commitments, Nagula Buru guarantees and welcomes profitable business opportunities.

Directors

Rueben Lee-Chi and Darren Puertollano are Nagula Buru's directors.

Both directors were born and grew up in Broome and are closely connected with local industry, employers and the wider community. They are well known to professionals at major resource companies such as Woodside, Shell and Murphy's Oil.

The directors are members of several significant boards and Traditional Owner groups. They understand the sensitivities that exist between large resource sector corporations and existing native titleholders. This understanding, balance and experience are invaluable in negotiating working arrangements in this region.

Darren Puertollano

Mr. Puertollano is a professional trainer and has worked successfully across Kimberley and Pilbara regional mining and construction projects. He is currently managing the Indigenous Training facility for Kimberley Quarries and is involved in their recruitment and training activities.

Darren is a Director of the Nyamba Buru Yawuru Prescribed Body Corporate, a corporation with significant influence in the region.

Rueben Lee-Chi

Mr. Lee-Chi is an experienced sales manager and is currently working with First National Real Estate, Broome. He is also an experienced trainer with Kimberley Training Institute.

An important strength is his business administration and human resource management skills. Mr. Lee-Chi has formal qualifications in aquaculture and training and is also a Director of the prominent Nyamba Yawuru Buru (NBY) Board. He is currently a board member of the Roebuck Primary School.
